OFFICE OF THE DEAN

Indiana University–Purdue University
Indianapolis

Congratulations, Class of 2020! This certainly will be a day to remember, although I imagine not for all the reasons you had hoped. I extend my congratulations to your families and friends, and my heart goes out to all who are disappointed they did not get to see their graduate walk across the stage.

For many of us, there has been a feeling of loss during the COVID-19 pandemic – loss of lives, loss of the normalcy of life as we knew it, loss of special events postponed or cancelled. I know that I, along with the faculty and staff, also feel sad that we did not have more face-to-face time with you in your final semester, even as we are so proud of and happy for you as you launch into your careers.

You are a special class. You graduated during Indiana University's bicentennial celebration, as well as a global pandemic. The world's calamity should never diminish your sense of accomplishment for arriving at this day. The last six weeks of your final semester do not define the years of training that preceded them.

We were proud of you before; we are even prouder of you now that you achieved this major milestone under these challenging conditions. The interruption in your final months at IUSD has required you to be resilient, flexible, and patient in dealing with ambiguity – strengths that perhaps you did not know you possessed when you began your dental education – qualities that will serve you well in practice.

Dentistry has survived infectious disease crises before, and we will get through this, together. I was a dental diagnostic sciences resident at Indiana University during the HIV/AIDs crisis in the late 1980s and early 1990s. At the time, we did not know what we were dealing with nor how the disease was transmitted. We learned so much about universal precautions, infectious disease, and our capacity to provide competent, compassionate care in challenging circumstances. Dentistry emerged as a leader in developing infection control protocols for the health professions. We will again combine the best of our profession – science and knowledge, critical thinking, ethics, and technical skills – to determine how we will provide care for our patients in a new era of infectious disease management.

As oral health providers, we have committed to serving on the front lines and taking on more risk than the average person. Helping the public is our responsibility and our duty.

Your graduation is but one day of your entire career, which commences now. You may look back at this time and recall that while we were physically separated, the crisis actually brought us closer together and clarified what is important in our lives. Be confident that you received what you needed from the Indiana University School of Dentistry to serve as excellent oral health care professionals. You have the tools to launch, and your learning will be lifelong.

We are so immensely proud of you. Keep learning! Keep growing! Keep caring! Keep in touch!
#IUSDTogetherStrong

With fondest regards and well wishes,

Carol Anne Murdoch-Kinch, DDS, PhD, FDS RGDS(Ed)

TENTH DEAN OF
INDIANA UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF DENTISTRY

DR. CAROL ANNE MURDOCH-KINCH

Dr. Carol Anne Murdoch-Kinch grew up in a family of health care professionals. Her dad was a dentist; her mother a nurse. All of her siblings are health professionals as well.

"I spent a lot of time in my dad's dental office in Fredericton, New Brunswick, Canada. It was closer to my elementary school than to our home, so I would walk there after school. I liked watching him interact with his patients," said Dean Murdoch-Kinch. "I chose dentistry because it allowed me to help people, work with my hands, and use biology and medicine."

Dr. Murdoch-Kinch studied biology at the University of New Brunswick and completed her DDS at Dalhousie University Faculty of Dentistry in Halifax, Nova Scotia in 1985. After working in private practice and teaching part-time at Dalhousie, she left Canada to study dental diagnostic sciences at Indiana University School of Dentistry.

"One of the pivotal moments of my life was deciding to go to Indiana. I had no idea at the time how important that decision would be," Dean Murdoch-Kinch said. She completed her certificate in dental diagnostic sciences in 1991 and a PhD in Dental Sciences in 1996.

In the 30 years since she came to Indiana University, Dr. Murdoch-Kinch's academic pursuits have included serving as associate professor with tenure at the University of Detroit Mercy School of Dentistry. She held several positions at the University of Michigan School of Dentistry from 2000-2019, including clinical professor in oral and maxillofacial surgery/hospital dentistry, associate dean for academic affairs, and the Dr. Walter Swartz Professor of Integrated Special Care Dentistry.

Dr. Murdoch-Kinch returned to the IU School of Dentistry in July 2019 to serve as the 10th dean of one of the largest public dental schools in the country and the first woman to hold the position.

"Becoming the school's first dean who is a woman was not a specific goal for me. Yet, the feedback I've received is that a woman serving in this role at this time is important to a lot of people."

Dr. Murdoch-Kinch is a diplomate of the American Board of Oral Medicine, the American Board of Oral and Maxillofacial Radiology, and the Fellowship of the Faculty of Dental Surgery in Oral Medicine of the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh.

"Coming back to Indiana is like coming home. This is the place that made me who I am," Dr. Murdoch-Kinch said. "I feel so fortunate to lead Indiana's dental school and advance the school that did so much for me. We have enormous potential to do so much good not just in Indiana, but for the world. The legacy of an excellent dental school is believing we can change the world for the better, and then doing it."

By ALICE G. HARVIE DUDEN, D.D.S., Indianapolis, Ind.

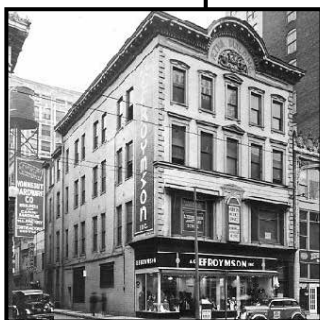

(Read before the Alumni Association, Louisville, Ky., Dental College, April 1908.)

He first man who was asked very promptly replied: "Dentistry deals principally with filling teeth, of course."

INDIANA UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF DENTISTRY

Indiana University School of Dentistry (IUSD) fosters an exceptional learning environment in which teaching, research, and community service converge to prepare future dental professionals. IUSD was founded in 1879 as the Indiana Dental College, with operational oversight assumed by Indiana University in 1925. IUSD is one of the oldest dental schools in the nation with more than 13,000 living alumni located across the United States and approximately 30 other countries. In March of 2018 IUSD dedicated its newest facility on the IUPUI campus – the 45,000-square-foot James J. Fritts, DDS Clinical Care Center – to continue our tradition of excellence in service and education into the future.

HAIL TO OLD IU WORDS BY J.T. GILES

Indiana's official Alma Mater song, "Hail to Old IU," was first performed on March 10, 1893, in Indianapolis. J.T. Giles, who organized the IU glee club, wrote the words to a Scottish song in order to give the Hoosiers a school song for a performance at a state contest. The song has been a mainstay at Indiana events since that day.

Come and join in song together,
Shout with might and main;
Our beloved Alma Mater,
Sound her praise again.
Gloriana Frangipana, E'er to her be true.
She's the pride of Indiana,
Hail to Old IU!

THE OFFICIAL COLOR

A shade of lilac is the official color of dentistry. The color was chosen to trim dental schools' graduation caps, gowns, and dental emblems.
